Bridal Guide

Wedding-day beauty shouldn't begin on the day-of while you're sitting in the stylist's chair. Start now to ensure you look your bridal best.

Great bridal looks require a little love and planning.

Washing, blow-drying, and heat-styling on a regular basis, as well as environmental factors can wreak havoc on your hair, so you'll want to start preparing so your locks look their very best on your special occasion.

Experts believe that a diet filled with Vitamin B helps bring out your hair's natural shine (dull hair is actually a symptom of a Vitamin B deficiency). Foods like fish, nuts, and eggs will give you a good head start.

On the outside, an invigorating scalp massage and deep conditioning treatment (about 4 weeks prior to the event) not only feels good, but stimulates the hair follicles and adds body. Despite what many bottles claim, there is no way to repair damaged ends -- once your hair breaks, get a trim. You'll want to do one final deep conditioning treatment, approved by your hairstylist, one week prior to wedding day.

While planning, you'll want to find a bridal stylist, if your hairstylist doesn't offer this service, that has the skills for the styles you're looking for. Please keep in mind, some stylists specialities are updos, or braids, or glam waves, and some stylists are able to achieve any or all of these styles. I highly recommend scheduling a bridal trial to ease your mind, get to know your bridal stylist, and try out your style so you'll be confident on wedding day, and stress-less. Note: glam waves are a demanding style. If this is even on your radar for the day of your wedding, you'll definitely want to try this style.

Traditional glam waves require a lot of hair, a lot of product, and are immovable. Yes, there are variations for a softer look, but most of the glam waves inspiration photos online are traditional, so please keep these things in mind. Also, most bridal styles look flawless due to A LOT of hair, so if you're like most brides, you'll want to explore the option of extensions {either a more permanent sew-in option or clip ins}.

As an extensions specialist and colorist who spends most of my time behind the chair, most of my brides are already clients. So I always recommend my brides have put together a Pinterest board or bridal look book with their inspiration and we book a consultation 2 to 3 months prior to their wedding date so we can chat about their vision, order extensions, color if that's an option, and get their bridal preview on the books.

I'm including a checklist below for my recommendations on when to start scheduling and beginning pre-wedding routines.

When a bride books with me, I have a preferred list of vendors for waxing, teeth-whitening, permanent makeup, tanning, florals, etc... if needed.
